SCHOOL REPORT.

SHAKERS.

Summer and fall term, Miss Jessie Evans teacher, Miss Helen Sabee, assistant.

Order, diligence, neatness and gentleness were noticeable characteristics of this school. On further examination we were pleased to find a breadth and originality of thought which is often lacking in such exact and critical teaching as was given by this teacher.

Winter term, Mr. Arthur Bruce, teacher. The order was perfect, the methods of instruction good, and the examinations indicated thorough work.

The books of the book-keeping class were examples of good penmanship and accurate work.

CARTER.

Spring term, Miss Nellie S. French of Northfield, teacher.

The wide experience of this lady as a teacher and a member of the Northfield school board, make her services especially valuable, and as usual her school was a success.

Fall and winter terms, Miss Elizabeth F. Houser, teacher.

The school lost nothing by exchange of teachers. The order was good and the recitations showed a fair degree of thoroughness.

A small class in languages was especially brilliant. The compositions and writing were worthy of praise.

We were glad to find that the effects of alcohol and narcotics on the human system were well taught. Those parents of this neighborhood who did not make an effort to send their children to school this winter made a sad mistake.

BOROUGH.

The summer term opened with Miss Sarah Glines in charge of the school and appearances indicated a successful term. At the end of the fifth week Miss Glines was obliged to discontinue teaching. Miss Louise M. Emery taught the remainder of the term.

This was Miss Emery's first experience in teaching. Her methods of instruction were unusually good for so young a teacher. The improvement in order during the last two weeks was commendable.

Miss Eliza M. Packard taught the fall term. The children appeared to be earnestly at work at the close of the first week.

On account of the cold weather the schools closed two weeks earlier than we intended, and notice of its examination was received too late for us to attend.

We hope the coming year to give the children of this neighborhood better school privileges. The pupils are too young to attend a winter school in so cold a house, and the hot days of July and August are not the best for study.

CENTRE.

This school was again fortunate in having the services, during the year, of Miss Flora M. Adams of Plymouth. The summer term was broken up by sickness among the pupils.

Miss Adams' qualifications and success as a teacher are too well known to need comment. Her efforts to assist her pupils in forming habits of order, neatness and temperance are of great value to this community. The classes in languages and civil government did especially good work. Some instruction in music was given and improvement in the voices of the children was noticeable.

Shaker, Borough, Carter and Centre schools reported by Caroline F. Emery.

HILLVILLE.

Teacher of summer and fall terms, Frank L. Brown. Mr. Brown worked hard for the success of the school.

Good order was maintained and we can unite with those who visited the school at the examination in giving the teacher and pupils the verdict that is due them.

Winter term was taught by W. D. Ingalls.

BLANCHARD.

Summer term taught by Miss Grace E. Colby. Miss Colby has taught this school several terms with marked success.

Fall term taught by Miss Mary D. Webster, a teacher of experience. This was Miss Webster's first experience as a teacher in this school. The examination at the close of the school showed that good work had been done.

Winter term taught by Miss Ella Hancock. Miss Hancock has taught several terms of school in this and other towns with good success. The teacher offered a prize to the pupil who should have the greatest number of perfect lessons for the term. Three of the pupils with three hundred lessons, had two hundred and eighty perfect ones. There were others whose percentage was nearly as good. The percentage of this school for the year in deportment and scholarship has been very creditable to both teacher and pupils.

Hillville and Blanchard schools reported by W. D. Ingalls.

HACKLEBOROUGH.

There was but one term of school here during the year and that was taught by Miss Clara Pickard, and as we did not receive any notice of the time the school was to close are unable to give a full report.

LOWELL T. MASON.

GENERAL REMARKS

In presenting to you our annual report of the schools in town we have endeavored to give you a brief outline of the present condition, and to make such suggestions as we believe are for the best interests of our common schools, which should be our aim, for it is there the foundation is laid for success or failure in life of the coming generation. Of the several schools in town the Blanchard, Centre, Carter and Hillville have had 30 weeks of school each; the Baptist 30 weeks at Kezer Seminary, the Borough 20 weeks; while in Hackleborough we had one term of 10 weeks, to accommodate the small scholars, and the larger scholars attended school at Kezer Seminary 20 weeks, at the town's expense; also some of the small scholars went there a portion of the time. •

We must again urge a more constant attendance, for we believe the parent or guardian who fails to improve every opportunity for the pupil is robbing them of that which can never be made up to them in after life, and we cannot refrain from urging the parents to make a greater effort to have their children attend school every day when in session; for one day lost can never be returned, and is of far greater value than any fancy sketch we can draw on their imagination of any promised reward for the small amount of work they might do while at home, for the better education we can give them the better will they be able to grasp with the stern realities of life. This is our first year under the free text-book system, and has necessarily increased the expense of running our schools. In selecting the books great care has been taken to get those that were best adapted to the wants of the pupil. Yet, while it has increased the town expenses, it has been a relief to individuals who could ill afford to purchase new books or replace the old ones with those introduced by some agent, whose only object in changing was his commission; and, while everything in the school-room is found by the town, parents should urge upon the pupil the importance of carefully preserving the school-books—for they are the property of the town and are only loaned to the scholars—and thus set the example of true economy instead of the reverse, by scheming to transfer some of the public funds into your own pocket. We can see no reason why the parents should not take the same interest in conveying their children to and from school as in former years, for every dollar expended in transportation reduces the school fund.

Let us all unite to make our schools a success, by casting aside all personal feeling and jealousy, and work with one common interest—the education of our youth—and not only will it be of an advantage to them, but will benefit us by increased prosperity of our town.

In conclusion we extend to you our thanks for your co-operation and the courtesies shown, and hoping the schools the coming year will be more successful than any of the past, we respectfully submit our report.

LOWELL T. MASON,
For the School Board.
